INTRODUCTION

Spatial System

- The three-dimensional integration of program elements and spaces accommodates the multiple functions and relationships of a house.

Structural System

- A grid of columns supports horizontal beams and slabs.
- The cantilever acknowledges the direction of approach along the longitudinal axis.

Enclosure System

- Four exterior wall planes define a rectangular volume that contains the program elements and spaces.

Villa Savoye, Poissy, east of Paris, 1923–31, Le Corbusier

This graphic analysis illustrates the way architecture embodies the harmonious integration of interacting and interrelated parts into a complex and unified whole.
